Every letter which goes through the postoffice receives a postmark or stamp, with the name of the place at which the letter was first mailed. Through the carehalf the letters which reach us, it is utterly undistinguishable, frequently but one or two of the letters composing the name of the place being decipherable at all. These postmarks are intended for information, or the trouble of placing them upon the letters would otherwise not be imposed upon the postoffice attendants. If they are intended for information, they should be imeasily read. There is no excuse whatever for the imperfeet manner in which the work is performed, and as the postmark is really a very important part of the letter, it done in a more satisfactory manner. It is just as easy | County. to have good clearly-cut stamps, and to mark the letters distinctly, as it is to have worn stamps, which will make no distinguishable marks, and clerks to impress them carelessly upon the letters .- Bultimore Sun.

THE UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE seems to be strikingly suggestive of disunion, wherever a people enjoy, in any degree, freedom of opinion and speech. Suffer but the latter and the unnatural alliance is instantly apparent. We gave an illustration some time since, in the terms with which a portion of the British press dealt with a "pluralist" who had deceased with the income of numerous "livings" in his hands. A later case has transpired in the agricultural line. We learn from the English papers that at a late meeting of an Agricultural Society in Kent, a Mr. Hoare, who seems to suppose that his opinions and acts were of some consequence, recently refused to act on a committee with Mr. Jull, a gentleman of substantial position and influence, but a dissenter from the "Established Church." Mr. Hoare seems to have taken a time and opportunity to discontinue his membership when he thought he could do most damage to the society, but the sturdy Kentish farmers rallied to the support of the dissenter and effectually vindicated their own appreciation of liberty of conscience. Mr. Hoare was suffered to retire in silent contempt, and Mr. Jull was heartly sustained by the meeting and its chairman. Sir Edmund Filmer, a member of Parliament, was present and identified himself with the society in the face of Mr. Hoare's withdrawal. Another in stance in point, illustrative of the progress of liberal opinions, and sustained, as is almost invariably the case, cordially and with becoming spirit by the farming interests.—Baltimore Sun.

DRIED FRUIT-Has arrived sparingly since our last, and there is little or none at present on market. We note a fair demand, and quote at 41 to 5 cents for Apples, and 101 to 11 cents for Peaches. FEATHERS .- But few have been received for some time past, and the market is entirely bare. We notice an active demand, and parcels sell readily at 45 to 50 cents per lb., as FISH .- Mullets continue to be in fair request, and there is only a small supply on market. We quote from vessel at $6 for pine and $7 25 for oak bbls. A lot of 143 bbls. mixed was received on Monday, and changed hands on terms not FLOUR .- We have no change of importance to report in State brands. The arrivals both by river and railroad continue light, and the stock on market is unusually small; there is, however, but little demand at present, and the sales have been principally in the small way. We quote a few sales at $6 10 to $6 25 for superfine, and $6 35 to $6 50 for family-closing at lowest prices.
